

Our Mission & Methodology

At James Costalupes, General Contractor, Inc. we are proud to stand strong as one of the last 'old school builders' that believe a home should be constructed with good-old-fashioned experience — as well as the most up-to-date computer-aided design. For more than 35 years, our clients have trusted us with this traditional approach, and with good reason.

With today's world of technology, we have seen a new generation of inexperienced builders that attempt to build a project with their laptop ... and then outsource it all. This is not the case with our company. From start to finish, we fuse our years of success with time-honored skills to create a masterpiece wrapped with discerning taste, attention to detail, value, quality, functionality and superior 'hands-on' craftsmanship.

From the very beginning, we establish a trusting relationship among our clients, our craftsmen and the entire James Costalupes team. Together, we are focused on one goal: you and your dream.

In the end, we will have captured your vision and navigated the project to impeccable completion ... while we extended the forthright service and respect that you have earned and deserve.

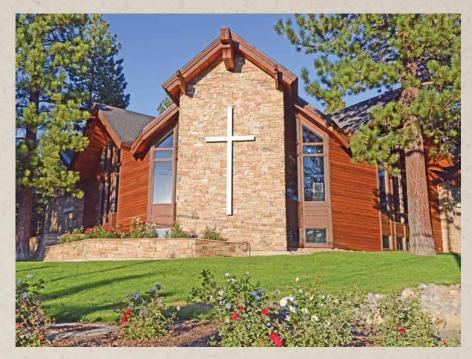

Tell Us Your Dreams

We enjoy every opportunity to build architecturally classic custom homes in and around the High Sierra. Be it a beautiful new church, or house that turns into a 'home sweet home', all of our projects are of exceptional quality and durability built according to our clients' needs and desires.

With a drive for perfection and a sincere passion for building beautiful, livable homes and dynamic business environments, our team will work with you hand-in-hand with clear communication and budget review throughout each step of the way.

Whether we are building a legendary home for generations to enjoy for years ahead or constructing significant commercial space, we have a proven track record in fulfilling each of our clients' investments and personal interests.

At SPITSEN LUMBER CO., whether you are a contractor or a do-it-yourselfer, you can count on experienced salespeople, quality products, and dependable service to get your job done right.
